JANUARY 2005

French Toast baked in Honey Pecan Sauce

From the book Intercourses, an aphrodisiac cookbook

This recipe offers the ultimate experience in French toast. For delectable results, stray not from the recipe, preparing the night before with thick slices of a baguette. The eggs, cream, and sweeteners saturate the bread overnight, then puff up to a golden, sticky ecstasy in the morning's hot oven.

4 eggs
¾ cup half-and-half
½ tablespoon brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
4 thick slices of French bread
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup honey
¼ cup maple syrup
¼ cup chopped pecans

Combine the eggs, half-and-half, brown sugar, and vanilla extract in a small bowl.

Pour half of the mixture into the baking dish. Place bread in the pan and top with remaining egg mixture. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

Melt butter in a 9x13" baking dish and stir in brown sugar, honey, maple syrup, and pecans. Add soaked bread slices. Bake at 350°F for 30 to 35 minutes until puffed and brown.
